SECTION – A(Reading Skills)*[M. M. : 20

1. Read the following passage carefully and answer the questions that follow :

1. Have you ever felt your heart racing, your palms turning clammy, or a sudden chill running down your spine when something startled you ?

These are not random quirks of the body ; they are part of the carefully wired fear response designed to protect you.

2. When you get scared, your brain and body work in sync to trigger what is commonly known as the fight-or-flight response. This reaction prepares you to either confront the threat or escape from it by releasing adrenaline, increasing your heart rate and sharpening your senses.
3. The first thing that happens when you encounter a frightening situation is the firing of amygdala, the brain's built-in alarm system. This tiny structure rapidly processes the sight, sound, or sensation of danger and signals the hypothalamus to prepare the body for action. At the same time, the hippocampus compares the situation with past experiences, helping you judge whether the threat is genuine or not.

3502/(Set : A)

4. Behind the rapid physical changes are powerful chemicals. The adrenal glands release adrenaline and cortisol, a combination that makes you hyper-alert and temporarily stronger. Adrenaline speeds up your heart rate and reaction times, while cortisol increases blood sugar to provide a quick energy boost.
5. Fear is meant to be an occasional survival tool, not a constant companion. That is why, chronic fear can weaken the immune system, disturb digestion, raise blood pressure, and disrupt sleep. However, practices like deep breathing and regular exercises can calm the nervous system, burn off excess adrenaline and keep stress hormones in check.

Questions :

1 × 10 = 10

- (i) What is the brain's built-in alarm system called ?
 - (a) Amygdala

1. Personal hygiene refers to the practices that individuals undertake to maintain cleanliness and promote overall health. It encompasses various habits and routines that contribute to preventing illness, promoting well-being and enhancing social interactions.
2. Good personal hygiene is crucial for preventing the spread of infectious diseases. Regular hand washing especially before meals and after using the restroom, significantly reduces the transmission of bacteria, viruses and other pathogens. Proper oral hygiene, including brushing and flossing teeth, helps prevent dental cavities, gum disease and bad breath.

3. Practising good hygiene habits supports overall physical health. Bathing or showering daily removes dirt, sweat and excess oils from the skin, preventing skin infections and promoting skin health. Clean clothes and regular laundering reduce the risk of skin irritations and allergic reactions caused by dust mites.
4. Personal hygiene plays a crucial role in social interactions and self-esteem. Maintaining clean hair, skin and clothing enhances one's appearance and fosters confidence in social and professional settings. This promotes personal comfort and prevents potential embarrassment in social situations.
