Q.37 The exploitative policies of the British had a bad impact on India and Indians. Indian Were not satisfied with the slavery and exploitation policy of the Britishers. The British government completely exploited the Indians. She interfered in Indian culture. Indians completely opposed this intervention of the Britishers. Every year, protests by Indians against the exploitation of British rule were seen surging in some part of India. The collective reaction to this protest appeared in the form of the revolt of 1857. Religious-social reform movements started in India in the nineteenth century. These movements not only had an impact on religion, society and literature but also on the political life of India. National consciousness gradually began to infuse political life. Due to the influence of this consciousness, political organizations started being established in the country. With the emergence of political national consciousness, the feeling became stronger among the Indians that India belongs to the Indians and only the Indians have the right on Indian resources. In the same century, the sentiments of independence began to blossom in the bleak slavery of Indians and their sense of civilisation, culture and self-respect became stronger.

Apartheid was the name of a system of racial discrimination unique to South Africa. The white Europeans imposed this system on South Africa. Since 1950, the blacks, colored and Indians fought against the apartheid system. They launched protest marches and strikes. The African National Congress (ANC) was the umbrella organization that led the struggle against the policies of segregation. This included many workers' unions and the Communist Party. Many sensitive whites also joined the ANC to oppose apartheid and played a leading role in this struggle. Several countries denounced apartheid as unjust and racist. But the white racist government continued to rule by detaining, torturing and killing thousands of black and coloured people. As protests and struggles against apartheid had increased, the government realised that they could no longer keep the blacks under their rule through repression. The white regime changed its policies. Discriminatory laws were repealed. Ban on political parties and restrictions on the media were lifted. After 28 years of imprisonment, Nelson Mandela walked out of the jail as a free man. Finally, at the midnight of 26 April 1994, the new national flag of the Republic of South Africa was unfurled marking the newly born democracy in the world. The apartheid government came to an end, paving way for the formation of a multi-racial government.

Q.39 The Himalayan mountain system exhibits a youthful topography. It is characterized by towering peaks, deep valleys, and swiftly flowing rivers. The Himalayan region was formed by the collision of The Eurasian plate and the Indo-Australian plates due to continental drift. Most of the rocks found in the Himalayan region are sedimentary. The Himalayan region is Arc-shaped. Mount Everest is the highest peak in the Himalayan region. In the Himalayan region, the average height of the Mountain peaks is around 6000 m. Himalayan rivers which originate in the Himalayan region, are longer than the peninsula rivers.

The peninsular plateau consists of igneous and metamorphic rocks. These give rise to gently rising hills and expansive valleys. The peninsular plateau was formed by the breaking and drifting of the Gondwana land. The peninsular plateau is triangular-shaped. Most of the rocks found in the Peninsular plateau are igneous rocks. Anamudi is the highest mountain peak on the peninsular plateau. The average height of a mountain peak in the peninsular plateau is around 900 m. Peninsular rivers which originate in the peninsular plateaus are shorter than the Himalayan rivers.
